VIRGINIA ELECTRIC & POWER CO. Tells Court Rate Increase 'Necessary'

Virginia Electric and Power Company has notified the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals in Richmond that the 1970 rate increase was "necessary, and indeed only one of a succession of increases that may well prove to be necessary," to maintain the ability of Vepco to supply essential electric service.

In its brief to the court, Vepco denied allegations by parties appealing the company's new rates.

The company was granted a 9.2 per cent increase effective July 1, 1970, by the State Corporation Commission.

The brief states that the June 10, 1970 order by the SCC" is in accord with governing law and supported by substantial evidence."

Utilities across the nation are now compelled to seek rate relief, in "unprecedented numbers and with unprecedented urgency" according to the brief, for three primary reasons: (1) the duty of the [illegible] to supply what the public demands, (2) the extremely rapid growth in the public demand, (3) the sharp increase in virtually every item of the cost of providing service.
